

Portugal joins the group of countries that have a public service for reporting illegal content on the Internet. The service Linha Alerta will make available to the general public a set of means by which to anonymously report any situation that might imply child abuse, incitement to racism and xenophobia, terrorism and violence. These reports are submitted to triage and duly forwarded for subsequent investigation and eventual judicial action.